In addition to his parents, John is predeceased by his wife MaryAnn (Ryan) in 1988 and twelve siblings through the years.

In his youth, John spent much time working on horse and dairy farms in Pine Plains, NY. It laid the foundation for teaching him about the values of hard work and responsibility. He lived there for 25 years and returned to Sarasota in 2015 to be closer to his family. In his later years one of his favorite past times was watching and cheering on the Tampa Bay Rays and enjoying more family dinners and celebrations with his children and grandchildren. Through the years, he also treasured his many trips back to New York to visit family and friends.

My family and I had the pleasure of meeting John later in life. He was truly a nice man and we enjoyed spending time with him. My favorite memory of John is sitting with him and listenng to him tell us about his life when he was growing up. He would explain how he worked the potato farms in the Hamptons and how he walked through the fields to school with his brother. He loved to talk about his family and how proud he was of them. I always remember him saying that was the "good old days". RIP John you are home now at peace.
