From his children.....My grandfather was made of cigarettes and seashells
He grew from hardship like a weed pushes through concrete
He raised my mother who in turn raised me
I am who I am because he was who he was

My grandfather was made of seashells and seabirds
He wove elaborate tales
Communed with the birds and the lizards
Kept Snickers in the freezer to satisfy his sweet tooth

My grandfather was made of seabirds and an old typewriter
He loved the sea and my grandmother
And he wrote elaborate tales
He understood adventure could be found between the pages of an old book

My grandfather was a piece of sea glass
Years held captive in the waves
His sharp edges softened
Made perfect for hugging grandchildren

May you have Fair winds and Following Seas in the beyond.
